

Loyola Marymount University Chose Zurn Products as Part of Their On-Going Conservation Efforts

Loyola Marymount Strives to be a "GREEN" University.

California Universities Develop a Green Mindset

It seems that as of late the number of colleges and universities that are going "green" are rapidly climbing. Loyola Marymount is one of the latest west coast colleges to continue its mission to stay environmentally efficient. January 2009 marked the completion of LMU's retro-fit plumbing installation of high efficiency toilets and urinals in efforts to conserve water consumption and lower operating costs.

Project Background

Zurn contacted Loyola Marymount back in July of 2007 regarding their efforts to conserve water. Upon meeting with Facilities Management, it was agreed to allow a Zurn Pint Urinal to be installed for evaluation. The Z5798 Pint Urinal was installed as a sample for LMU to compare next to a waterless urinal to gain a better feel of the product's performance.

Along with green roofing systems, solar technology, self-conserving sprinkler systems and recycling programs, LMU has recently completed a retrofit plumbing project that includes both Zurn 1.28 gpf High Efficiency Toilets and Zurn Pint Urinals.

Zurn Follows Up with LMU with Positive Reviews

Six months after the installation, Zurn followed up with the Director of Plant Operations, Michael Lotito. The Pint received rave reviews. Even though a Pint Urinal still uses water to perform, it is only 16 oz. and provides for 88% water savings and requires far less maintenance than a waterless urinal.
